

Brian Barwick becomes Chairman of Kickworldwide

Kickworldwide are delighted to announce that Brian Barwick - the former Chief Executive of the English Football Association - has joined the company as its Chairman.

Brian, who was also Head of Sport at BBC and ITV, became CEO of the FA in 2005 and during his term of office oversaw the opening of the new Wembley Stadium and led on the appointment of Fabio Capello as Coach of the England team in December 2007.

He is a Global Ambassador for Soccerex, the leading football business events management company and Visiting Professor at Liverpool University's Management School.

Kickworldwide Director Steve Cartwright said today: "Brian's appointment is a tremendous addition to our senior management team. His experience in football administration and broadcasting is unrivalled and he is a globally respected figure in the sport."

Brian Barwick added: "I am very excited to be joining Kickworldwide. The company has an excellent track record and very promising future. I hope to play a significant part in growing the business."
